DETAILED ACTION

The amendment filed 24 March 2003 is objected to under 35 U.S.C. 132 because it introduces new matter into the disclosure. 35 U.S.C. 132 states that no amendment shall introduce new matter into the disclosure of the invention. The added material which is not supported by the original disclosure is as follows:

n-type source/drain regions 34 (The original disclosure does not teach n-type source/drain regions 34.)

Applicant is required to cancel the new matter in the reply to the Office action.

Claims 1 and 3-17 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the written description requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to reasonably convey to one skilled in the relevant art that the inventor(s), at the time the application was filed, had possession of the claimed invention.

The specification as originally filed does not teach any dopant type for the source/drain regions. Claim language specifying a dopant type for the source or drain is therefore new matter.

The "counterdoped region of first conductivity type disposed with said source region forming a source and within said drain region forming a drain" in amended claim 1 is new matter. No counterdoped region forming a source, or forming a drain is taught in the original disclosure.

Art Unit: 2811

The "counterdoped region of first conductivity type . . . isolated from the remaining portion of said region of semiconductor material by said source region and said drain region" is new matter. No such isolation by source and drain is taught in the original disclosure.

The "second doped region . . . having a greater charge-carrier mobility than said first region" is new matter. The specification as originally filed teaches only that the second doped region has a greater charge-carrier mobility than conventional surface channels. (See, for example, page 7, lines 6-7.) The specification does not teach anywhere that the "first region" has the same charge-carrier mobility as a conventional surface channel.

There is no teaching of the device of claim 9, where a subsurface layer is the primary conduction channel, and at the same time the subsurface layer has a lower concentration of dopant than the overlying layer. The specification does not address the question of the amount of counterdopant to be added to the respective channel regions as claimed, when the subsurface layer is utilized as the primary conduction channel.

Claims 1 and 3-17 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the enablement requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to enable one skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and/or use the invention.

Art Unit: 2811

There is no teaching provided to enable one of ordinary skill to make a device having a subsurface doped primary channel layer having a greater charge-carrier mobility than an undoped or doped surface layer.

Conclusion

Applicant's amendment necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP § 706.07(a). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.
